Red and Green Kangaroo Paw

Angiozanthos manglesii

Western Australia's Floral Emblem

The most admired of the Kangaroo paw species, the flower has become symbolic of Western Australia. The display between August and November is remarkable for the high standing flowers, occurring in urban and coastal regions.

Red and Green Kangaroo Paw seeds germinate readily from seed, especially when sown in sandy soil. It is best treated as a biennial as cultivated plants tend to deteriorate after the second season. Supplementary watering of cultivated plants should be avoided during summer when they are dormant.

Fresh flowers of Red and Green Kangaroo Paw last well in water and its brilliant colours and unusual form are exploited to great effect in simple line arrangements. It retains its colours well as a dried flower and is often sold in bunches of mixed Western Australian wildflowers.
